

Modern France:

(Upper level History) This class will study European history from 1815 through the Second World War, focusing on mainly France, Britain and Germany. The course will explore new imperialism, the rise of modern politics, the second industrial revolution, the causes and course of World War One, Europe between the wars and the advent and implications of totalitarianism. If you have already had a college history course but want additional grounding in the main themes of modern history, this course will be excellent for you.