NOTE : The data above represents, by academic year, all program graduates who sat for the PRAXIS II and/or Principles of Learning & Teaching (PLT) exam prior to graduation. The aspirational goal of a 90% pass rate is for all teacher education licensure programs. The highest score is reported. This data is broken down further by academic college and content area (assessment level data) in the tables below. Summary level data may differ from assessment level data because students are counted once at the summary level, but may be counted more than once at the assessment level if a student sat for multiple exams. While USM's educator preparation program is currently accredited by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE), the program is also seeking national accreditation through the Council for the Accreditation of Educator Preparation (CAEP).

NOTE : In May 2018, the passing score for the PRAXIS II (Mathematics) exam was changed from 160 to 152, effective immediately and retroactively. The passage rate data above is calculated based on the passing score at the time the test was administered and does not necessarily indicate if a program completer received licensure based on the retroactive score of 152.
