Retailers’ concerns mount over expired longshoremen’s contract

Retailers concerned by the lack of a West Coast longshoremen’s contract are warning that merchandise could soon be stalling in the ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach, according to a report released by the National Retail Federation and Hackett-Lazaro.

“The negotiations have made progress and retailers have been stocking up, but there’s still a lot of that needs to be done before the holiday season kicks off,” said President for Supply Chain Executive, John Wilton. “Retailers are making sure that the consumer demand during the holidays will be met.”

John Fayard Moving & Warehousing expands in Gulfport

John Fayard Moving & Warehousing invested $2.2 million to build a new facility in the city’s Bernard Bayou Industrial District.

Construction is complete on a 150,503-square-foot warehouse and storage facility. The building is on a railroad spur from the new building to the Kansas City Southern track. The land for the new warehouse was purchased from the Harrison County Development Commission, which also helped the company secure a grant through Mississippi’s Development Authority’s Development Infrastructure Program for the railroad spur.
