Mission / Purpose
The mission of the Masters in Public Relations degree program in the School of Mass Communication and Journalism is to provide students graduate-level preparation in communication management skills, communication and public relations theory, information gathering and analysis, as well as a sound knowledge of the role and function of professional communication in public and private organizations in order to prepare them for leadership positions in public relations and related fields and/or to continue their graduate education at a graduate school of their choice.

Student Learning Outcomes/Objectives, with Any Associations and Related Measures, Targets, Findings, and Action Plans

SLO 1: Mass Communication and Public Relations Theories
Students will demonstrate knowledge in mass communication and public relations theories and the ability to integrate these concepts, theories, and principles to public relations problems and opportunities.

Related Measures:

M 1: Comprehensive Exam
Master’s degree candidates must pass a six-hour written comprehensive examination that tests the accumulation and integration of knowledge from his or her area of study as well as the ability to evaluate information and ideas. This examination may not be taken until all core and research method courses are completed and the student has no more than six hours of coursework left. The student must stay enrolled in the semester for at least 3 hours when the comprehensive examination is taken. The examination is offered on the Hattiesburg campus in summer, fall and spring semester.

The comprehensive examination is administered by the Graduate Coordinator. Students may be asked questions from any faculty member from whom they have had courses. Faculty members who submit questions read the answers to their own questions. If a student fails to write a satisfactory answer for any part(s) of the exam, the student will be asked to rewrite the section(s) (either a similar type of question or a second attempt at the same question). The format for the rewrite will be determined by the faculty member who gives the questions. If, after rewriting, the student has still not passed part(s) of the exam, the student's academic committee will meet in order to decide if the student has passed or failed the entire examination.

Source of Evidence: Comprehensive/end-of-program subject matter exam

Target:
80 percent of students will demonstrate the ability to understand and apply mass communication and public relations theories by passing the mass communication theory portion (MC 608 and MC 620) of the comps exam.

Findings (2013-2014) - Target: Partially Met
Overall, 81.3 percent of students demonstrated the ability to understand and apply mass communication and public relations theories by passing the mass communication theory portion (MC 608 and MC 620) of the comps exam, including 57.1 percent (4/7) in Summer 2013 (three students failed the entire exam due to cheating), 100 percent (3/3) in Fall 2013, and 100 percent (6/6) in Spring 2014.

M 2: Public Relations Campaign
Students in the Public Relations master’s program are required to develop a comprehensive campaign in the Public Relations Campaigns class (MC 621).

Source of Evidence: Capstone course assignments measuring mastery

Target:
80 percent of students will demonstrate competence in incorporating mass communication and public relations theories in the campaign planning process by providing theoretical foundation in the campaign plan, as judged by the professor.

Findings (2013-2014) - Target: Met
100% of students (16/16) in the Public Relations Campaign course (MC 621) demonstrated competence in incorporating mass communication and public relations theories in the campaign planning process by providing theoretical foundation in the campaign plan, as judged by the professor.

SLO 2: Research Skills
Students will be able to gather and analyze information and relate conclusions to the public relations opportunity or problem at hand or apply the findings to organizational strategic planning and/or strategic communication planning.

Related Measures:

M 1: Comprehensive Exam
Master's degree candidates must pass a six-hour written comprehensive examination that tests the accumulation and integration of knowledge from his or her area of study as well as the ability to evaluate information and ideas. This examination may not be taken until all core and research method courses are completed and the student has no more than six hours of coursework left. The student must stay enrolled in the semester for at least 3 hours when the comprehensive examination is taken. The examination is offered on the Hattiesburg campus in summer, fall and spring semester.

The comprehensive examination is administered by the Graduate Coordinator. Students may be asked questions from any faculty member from whom they have had courses. Faculty members who submit questions read the answers to their own questions. If a student fails to write a satisfactory answer for any part(s) of the exam, the student will be asked to rewrite the section(s) (either a similar type of question or a second attempt at the same question). The format for the rewrite will be determined by the faculty member who gives the questions. If, after rewriting, the student has still not passed part(s) of the exam, the student's academic committee will meet in order to decide if the student has passed or failed the entire examination.

Source of Evidence: Comprehensive/end-of-program subject matter exam

Target:
80 percent of students will demonstrate competence in comprehending and evaluating communication/public relations research by successfully answering questions for required research courses (MCJ 526, MC 720).

Findings (2013-2014) - Target: Partially Met
Overall, 75 percent of students (12/16) demonstrated competence in comprehending and evaluating communication/public relations research in their responses to relevant comps questions (MCJ 526, MC 720), including 57.1 percent (4/7) in Summer 2013 (three students failed the entire exam due to cheating), 100 percent (3/3) in Fall 2013, and 83.3 percent (5/6) in Spring 2014.
M 2: Public Relations Campaign
Students in the Public Relations master's program are required to develop a comprehensive campaign in the Public Relations Campaigns class (MC 621).

Source of Evidence: Capstone course assignments measuring mastery

Target:
80 percent of students will score 80 or higher on the evaluation of the summative research and evaluation components in the campaign project for MC 621, as judged by their project contact and their professor using a rubric designed to assess the quality of public relations campaigns.

Findings (2013-2014) - Target: Met
100% of students (16/16) scored 80 or higher on the evaluation of the summative research and evaluation components in the campaign project for MC 621, as judged by their project contact and their professor using a rubric designed to assess the quality of public relations campaigns.

SLO 3: Application of Skills - Campaign/Strategies
Students will demonstrate a thorough knowledge of mass communication and public relations theories and research by developing a comprehensive public relations campaign or providing in-depth analysis of public relations strategies.

Related Measures:

M 1: Comprehensive Exam
Master's degree candidates must pass a six-hour written comprehensive examination that tests the accumulation and integration of knowledge from his or her area of study as well as the ability to evaluate information and ideas. This examination may not be taken until all core and research method courses are completed and the student has no more than six hours of coursework left. The student must stay enrolled in the semester for at least 3 hours when the comprehensive examination is taken. The examination is offered on the Hattiesburg campus in summer, fall and spring semester.

The comprehensive examination is administered by the Graduate Coordinator. Students may be asked questions from any faculty member from whom they have had courses. Faculty members who submit questions read the answers to their own questions. If a student fails to write a satisfactory answer for any part(s) of the exam, the student will be asked to rewrite the section(s) (either a similar type of question or a second attempt at the same question). The format for the rewrite will be determined by the faculty member who gives the questions. If, after rewriting, the student has still not passed part(s) of the exam, the student's academic committee will meet in order to decide if the student has passed or failed the entire examination.

Source of Evidence: Comprehensive/end-of-program subject matter exam

Target:
80 percent of students will demonstrate competence in developing and analyzing public relations campaigns by successfully answering questions for campaign and strategy courses (MC 621, MC 626).

Findings (2013-2014) - Target: Partially Met
Overall, 81.3 percent of students (13/16) demonstrated competence in developing and analyzing public relations campaigns by successfully answering questions for campaign and strategy courses (MC 621, MC 626), including 57.1 percent (4/7) in Summer 2013 (three students failed the entire exam due to cheating), 100 percent (3/3) in Fall 2013, and 100 percent (6/6) in Spring 2014.

M 2: Public Relations Campaign
Students in the Public Relations master's program are required to develop a comprehensive campaign in the Public Relations Campaigns class (MC 621).
Source of Evidence: Capstone course assignments measuring mastery

Target:
80 percent of students will demonstrate competence in developing a comprehensive campaign and score 80 or higher on the campaign project, as judged by their project contact and their professor using a rubric designed to assess the quality of public relations campaigns.

Findings (2013-2014) - Target: Met
100% of students (16/16) demonstrated competence in developing a comprehensive campaign and scored 80 or higher on the campaign project, as judged by their project contact and their professor using a rubric designed to assess the quality of public relations campaigns.

SLO 4: Application of Skills - Internship/Project
Students will develop professional skills through major projects or supervised internships in various media settings.

Related Measures:

M 3: Internship Evaluation
Students in the Public Relations master’s program are required to complete a major project or a professional internship in the field of public relations. The project and the internship are administered by the Graduate Coordinator. The internship requires 20 hours per week. The student will be evaluated and graded by his/her supervisor at the end of the internship.

Source of Evidence: Field work, internship, or teaching evaluation

Target:
80 percent of students who completed internships will achieve ratings of good-to-excellent on professional applications measures of the internship application form, as judged by their internship supervisor.

Findings (2013-2014) - Target: Met
93.7 percent of students (15/16) who completed internships achieved ratings of good-to-excellent on professional applications measures of the internship application form, as judged by their internship supervisor.

M 4: Project/Internship Report
Students in the Public Relations master’s program non-thesis option are required to either complete a major project or complete a professional internship in the field public relations. The internship and the project are administered by the Graduate Coordinator. Students are required to submit a self-evaluation of the project or internship at the time of completion.

Source of Evidence: Portfolio, showing skill development or best work

Target:
80 percent of students who completed internships will indicate their satisfaction with skills developed during their internships in a self-report they complete at the end of the internships.

Findings (2013-2014) - Target: Met
100 percent of students (16/16) who completed internships indicated their satisfaction with skills developed during their internships in reports they complete at the end of the internships.

Other Outcomes/Objectives, with Any Associations and Related Measures, Targets, Findings, and Action Plans

O/O 5: Program Objective Outcome
The School of Mass Communication and Journalism will maintain an 80% graduation rate in the Public Relations MS programs.

Related Measures:

M 5: Institutional Research Report
Graduation data about the School of Mass Communication and Journalism programs will be acquired from the Institutional Research Office.

Source of Evidence: External report

Target:
The School of Mass Communication and Journalism will maintain an 80% graduation rate in the Public Relations MS program.

Findings (2013-2014) - Target: Met
The six-year graduation rate for the Public Relations MS program was at 96.4% during the 2013-2014 academic year.

Details of Action Plans for This Cycle (by Established cycle, then alpha)

PR comps exam action plan
Three students in the Public Relations MS program failed comps exam due to cheating. We took it as a serious problem. The graduate faculty met and discussed future plans. A statement was added to the Graduate Student Handbook and made aware to all graduate students. More graduate faculty will be helping the Graduate Coordinator administer the exam. The School is also preparing a reading list and a course on professional ethics.

Established in Cycle: 2013-2014
Implementation Status: Planned
Priority: High

Projected Completion Date: 05/30/2015
Responsible Person/Group: Graduate faculty in the School of Mass Communication and Journalism.

Analysis Questions and Analysis Answers

What specifically did your assessments show regarding proven strengths or progress you made on outcomes/objectives?

We are overall pleased with the performance of our students in the Public Relations MS program on multiple assessment measures in 2013-2014. The majority of the students who graduated from the master’s programs in Public Relations successfully passed the comprehensive exam and completed an internship. In the comprehensive exam, they demonstrated knowledge in mass communication and public relations theories and research. It shows that our theory and research courses have helped prepare students for the comprehensive exam. Many instructors require students to complete a research paper and submit it to a conference. A Graduate Research Forum was created to help cultivate research atmosphere among students. Students can present their research and exchange ideas at the monthly forum meetings. The forum also serves as a venue for graduate students and faculty to interact outside the classroom, which helps maintaining a healthy retention and graduation rate. Last year, 93.7 percent of students (15/16) who completed internships achieved ratings of good-to-excellent on professional applications measures of the internship application form, as judged by their internship supervisor. 100 percent of students (16/16) successfully completed a campaign project. We will continue to look closely at our outcomes and measures in the upcoming year to ensure that our students are succeeding our program.

What specifically did your assessments show regarding any outcomes/objectives that will require continued attention?
Three students in the Public Relations MS program failed comps exam due to cheating, which was troubling in terms of both their academic performance and professional ethics. The faculty have met to discuss this issue. An action plan was generated for next year.

Annual Report Section Responses

Program Summary
The mission of the Masters in Public Relations degree program in the School of Mass Communication and Journalism is to provide students graduate-level preparation in communication management skills, communication and public relations theory, information gathering and analysis, as well as a sound knowledge of the role and function of professional communication in public and private organizations in order to prepare them for leadership positions in public relations and related fields and/or to continue their graduate education at a graduate school of their choice. The Master of Science degree in Public Relations requires 30 hours, with an option of a thesis, major project, or an internship. This is the only Master’s program in Public Relations in the state of Mississippi. It is well-known throughout the region for quality education and outstanding alumni. Many of our graduates are leaders in their field and they maintain close ties with the School and the university. Last year, a few of them came back to either give guest lectures in class or help with portfolio review at the MCJ Career Day. All students in the Public Relations program successfully completed at least one internship. A student in the Public Relations MS program won Top Master’s Student Award for the 2013-2014 academic year. Another public relations student was included in a national list of 17 PR Students to Watch as compiled by public relations expert Arik Hanson. Many students in the Public Relations MS program gained valuable work experience by working with local and regional organizations for internship, such as the University of Southern Mississippi Alumni Association, the Learning Enhancement Center, Sanderson Farms, etc. To build on our success and make the program bigger and better, we have been considering the possibility of developing a hybrid program in the future when we have required resources.

Continuous Improvement Initiatives
The School of Mass Communication and Journalism will continue to maintain a robust assessment plan to measure the Public Relations program performance and effectively utilize our findings to help improve learning outcomes. We believe there are two areas we need to focus on - students’ knowledge of public relations theories and research, and professional training.

(1) Mass communication and public relations theories and research: Students are expected to master key public relations concepts by reading articles and books in MC 620 (Public Relations Theory) and applying those concepts in public relations practice in MC 621 (Public Relations Campaign) and MC 626 (Public Relations Strategies). Many instructors also require students to complete a research paper in class and require/encourage them to submit it to a conference. A list of mass communication conferences was compiled by the Graduate Coordinator and was shared with students. A reminder email will be sent to all students before the deadline for conference submission. The School would try its best to fund conference travel if a student's paper was accepted. A Graduate Research Forum was created to help cultivate research atmosphere among students. Students can present their research and exchange ideas at the monthly forum meetings. They are also encouraged to take advantage of research opportunities on campus, including present research at the Graduate Student Research Symposium and publish articles in the Synergy Journal. Students' research achievements are taken into account for the Top Master’s Student Award given out by the School every year.

(2) Professional training: All students in the Public Relations program are required to complete an internship upon graduation. To help students fully take advantage of the internship experience and help the School of Mass Communication and Journalism receive feedback from both the employer and the student, more detailed instructions were added to the internship forms last year, including agreement form, evaluation form and student feedback form. Many students in the program have full-time or part-time jobs while in school. Some of them have to commute from Jackson, Gulfport, or neighboring states such as Alabama and Louisiana. Therefore, several online/hybrid courses have been developed so students would be able to have a more flexible course schedule with less distractions. Students are also encouraged to attend career fair/portfolio workshops, join professional organizations (such as PRSSA and AAF), and work for the Student Media Center (such as the Student Printz and WUSM radio station). Many students in the Public Relations MS program gained valuable work experience by working with local and regional organizations for internship, such as the University of Southern Mississippi Alumni Association, the Learning Enhancement Center, Sanderson Farms, etc. Students are also encouraged to take a pedagogy course (MC 731) to prepare them for future teaching. These efforts should help students develop a stronger resume and prepare themselves for future employment.

We believe our small size and close student-adviser relationships should help maintain and improve graduation rate. We have an office for teaching assistants so they can interact with each other, as well as faculty and staff in the School. We try to identify problems early through the advising process and help provide solutions so the student can move on. Our alumni have frequently visited classrooms and met with students, which helped demonstrate the success of our program and cultivate a sense of belonging with our current students. We also need to continue to put more effort into recruiting students for the Public Relations MS program. A new brochure has been developed and was sent to mass communication programs in the southeast region. We participated in the Graduate Student Expo at the 2013 Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication (AEJMC) conference in D.C. We also set up a booth at the 2013 Southern Public Relations Federation conference to hand out flyers and talk to prospective students.

Closing the Loop

Three students in the Public Relations MS program failed comps exam due to cheating. The graduate faculty met and discussed solutions to this problem. A statement was added to the Graduate Student Handbook and made aware to all graduate students. More graduate faculty will be helping the Graduate Coordinator administer the exam. The School is also preparing a list of readings as well as a course on professional ethics.