Social Work: Human Rights and Social Development in Jamaica
SWK 495/695 - 4 credit hours
Prof. Karen Aderer – Karen.aderer@usm.edu or 228.214.3225

This course provides a cross-cultural experience in which students learn about Jamaican culture, human rights, social development, and social welfare. Students explore issues related to social justice, social development, and social welfare, along with the service delivery approaches being used to address the social needs of Jamaicans. Students visit Jamaican social service agencies in many of the traditional fields of practice (family and children, health, mental health, education, disabilities, and corrections).

Prerequisite: Social work majors
