This course provides a cross-cultural experience in which students learn about Cuban culture, human rights, social development, and social welfare. Students explore issues related to social justice, social development, and social welfare, along with the service delivery approaches being used to address the social needs of Cubans. Students visit Cuban social service agencies in many of the traditional fields of practice (family and children, health, mental health, education, and disabilities).

Prerequisite: Social work majors or permission of instructor
