

Tips from the Office of Leadership & Student Involvement

Student Activities Hub 110 | M-F 8am-5pm | 601.266.4403 | lsi@usm.edu

Over 200 organizations are involved in on campus in a variety of areas such as academic, athletic, games, religious, community service and special interest.

The Leadership and Student Involvement Office also provides leadership development experiences for students through workshops and events on a regular basis, all listed on our website.

The office also houses the Southern Miss Activities Council (SMAC) programming board offering free and fun entertainment for students on campus throughout the year!

Visit our website to check out the Student Involvement calendar that hosts ALL student organization events each week.

Why Does Involvement Matter?

Social integration in college is most often connected to student involvement.

Being involved allows you to be connected to your school, find resources more easily and meet more people, both students and faculty/staff, to network with.

Students who are involved out of the classroom can perform better academically.

Involved students are better time-managers and have better critical thinking skills than those that do not get involved.

Involvement helps build community.

Meeting new people and exploring new things helps you discover new interests and people you have things in common with.

It's not about the quantity of experiences you have but the quality.

Finding one or two organizations you are passionate about can enhance your skill set in ways you never would have gotten just inside the classroom. This in turn will make you more marketable when you graduate and can help you secure a job faster.

Being involved can actually help you persist and graduate on time.

Highly engaged students are more invested which means they are more likely to come back to school each semester than less engaged students.

www.usm.edu/lsi